About the admission interview:

The admission interview is the final step on your path to university and gives you the opportunity to impress during a personal or virtual meeting. It primarily serves to get to know you better, to concretize the insights gained so far in the admission process, and to determine the presence of further admission criteria.

The interview itself is conducted by a commission. This commission consists of the head of the study program or their representative, (possibly) a psychologist, and usually a staff member of the study program administration. The duration of the admission interview can vary from applicant to applicant. For more information about the admission interview, please refer to the invitation email, which will be sent to you after your application documents have been reviewed. If a waitlist position is allocated before the interview, you will also receive this information via email.

After completing the entire process and after the conclusion of the respective application phase, we will inform you of the outcome of your admission process.

For further information about the application and admission process, please contact the respective department.
